Expressive Chinese: Culture and Communication in a Changing China

Learn to think critically and communicate creatively about Chinese culture

Ideal for intermediate Chinese language learners, Expressive Chinese is a one-volume course designed to build advanced reading and writing proficiency in four areas: complexity, accuracy, fluency, and felicity (典雅度). Equip your students with the practical skills and intercultural competencies to confidently communicate feelings, thoughts, and opinions on topics ranging from the personal to the global.

Designed as part of an articulated curriculum sequence, Expressive Chinese is ideal for learners who have completed Integrated Chinese Volume 4 or the equivalent of two years of college-level study. Upon completing this course, learners will be prepared to study Reading Into a New China Volume 1.

Highlights

- Engages learners with field-tested content with an emphasis on self-expression
- Strengthens literacy skills unique to the Chinese language through innovative reading strategies and scaffolded exercises
- Empowers learners to draw their own conclusions about Chinese society and culture through critical thinking and collaborative discussions

About the Authors

With over 20 years of combined experience teaching college-level Chinese, Panpan Gao and Hongyun Sun drew upon extensive student feedback to address the most common content and skill gaps among intermediate Chinese learners. Panpan Gao is Lecturer in Chinese at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). Hongyun Sun is a Senior Lecturer in Chinese at Boston University (BU).
