With the destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and the fall of the Japanese military regime at the close of WWII, wartime censorship in Japan was lifted. In the boom of publishing, translating, and distribution that followed, Japan's postwar bundan - "literary world" - was born. This representative and diverse collection brings together works from the most prominent and influential writers of all formats from postwar Japan, including a script by Akira Kurosawa, a play by Kobo Abe, and stories from such names as Yasunari Kawabata, Kenzaburo Oe, Junichiro Tanizaki, into one definitive volume.

"A solid, sensitive and top-quality gathering. ... A treat for readers curious to discover the best in the flourishing Japanese literary scene." Publishers Weekly

"A uniquely comprehensive selection [which] should awaken wider interest in current Japanese writing." Kirkus Reviews

ABOUT THE AUTHORS In addition to two Nobel Prize winners (Kawabata & Oe), many of the writers in this collection have received several prestigious awards in their respective fields.

ABOUT THE EDITOR Howard Hibbett is a distinguished translator and professor emeritus of Japanese Literature at Harvard University.
